Project Methodology

Our project management methodology is a comprehensive, structured, top down phased approach by objectives. The structured approach used by DH has been ~~used~~ through many years of successfully managing projects. During each phase, the client should establish checkpoints to provide any major or critical review. This allows for a smooth transition into the next phase.

A major part of the overall project management activity is the evaluation and technical definition of the services required. During this period, each service is distributed into tasks and input into the master implementation plan. DH define the work and resources needed for providing the production services. Each service is defined as a task. Each task has an objective and/or milestone, assigned. In most cases, the production requested could have several tasks identified on the bar chart for tracking. This ensures successful completion of the service requested. Each service is assigned a priority, time frame, resource, and a schedule slot from which the project manager will coordinate the work that is to be done.

Using the phased approach permits effective management control over the major investment normally associated with systems acquisitions, installation, training and support. During the course of each phase, progress meetings with the client's representative assure that the project activities are consistent with the organization's objectives. At the end of each phase, the major reviews and approvals by the client make possible the successful move into the next phase.

The structured approach, summarized in the planning, installation, training and support documentation, is an effective aid for reporting the executed magnitude of production to the management.

Technical Approach

Our technical approach to wood production requested by the client follows in line with our project management methodology.

We analyze and review the production requested. The production is then classified as machines made or hand carved. The nature of each request determines its specific requirements for the skill level of the technicians and assignment of the proper resource. During the Implementation Phase, the technical skills/service requires a different type of data processing professional than normal ongoing production and installation.

The major implementation activities are:

- ❑ Installation on site (depends on the terms of agreement)
- ❑ Supervising of installation (depends on the terms of agreement)
- ❑ Training (as needed)
- ❑ Test Stage
- ❑ Commissioning

Proper definition of services, assignment of resources, and coordination of completion dates can enhance transforming the environment into a production environment. Throughout the entire process the client is consulted to ensure the final request meets its needs. Our goal is to provide the highest level of satisfaction to all the clients at all the different phases of production and delivery.

Safety Management

The safety of the employees is assigned as the highest priority during our operations. The responsibility of maintaining a safe workplace must be shared by employees, supervisors and administrators.

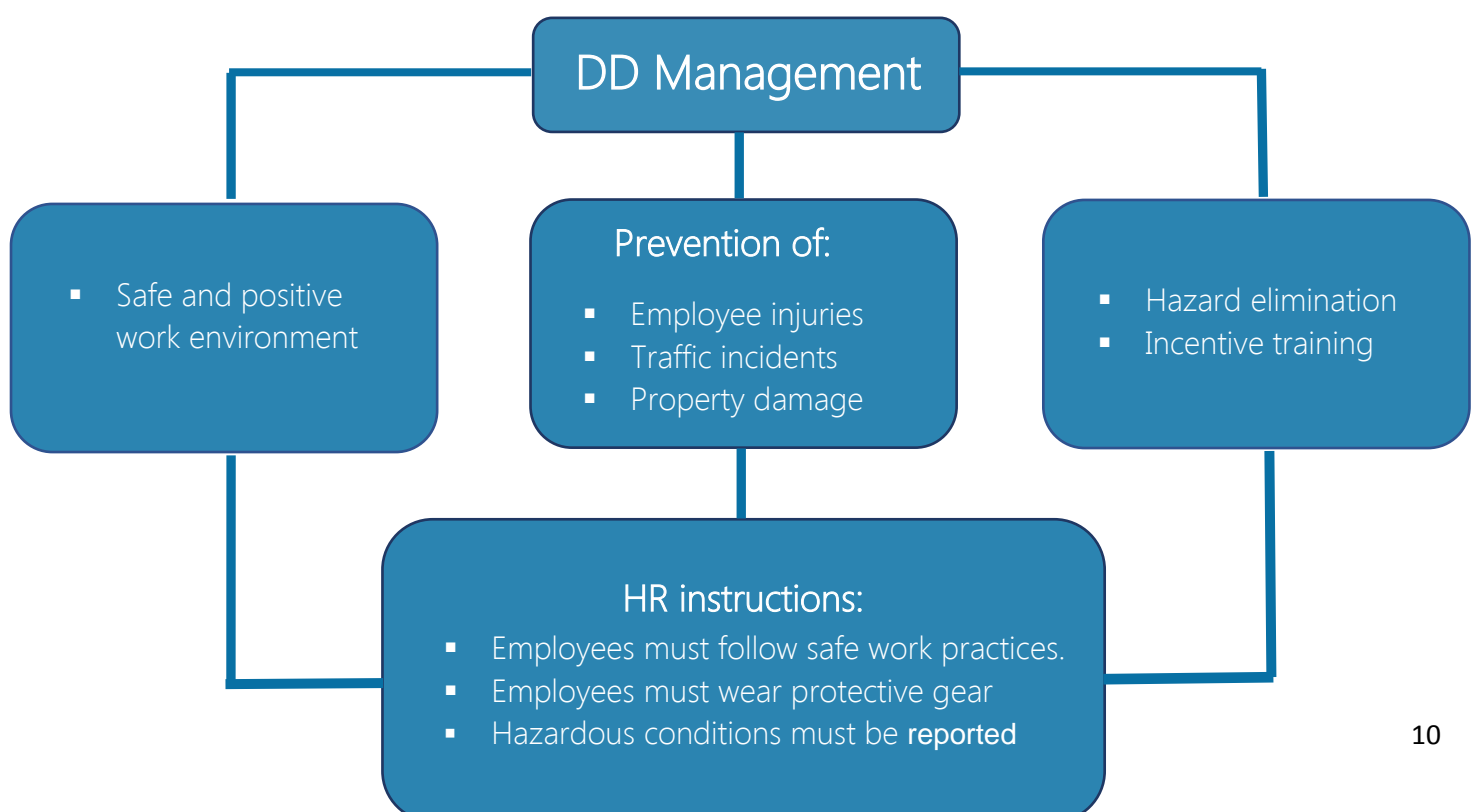

The benefits derived from a safe workplace include but are not limited to:

- The containment of worker's compensation premium;
- Compliance with the Holding safety laws and regulation;
- Improvement of employee productivity by reducing lost workdays; and
- Improvement of employee morale.

Accordingly, this manual is designed to provide overall guidelines to contribute to a safe work place and outlines general policies and procedures with which our employees should be familiar.

This manual is developed and maintained by the Human Resource department. The department welcomes comments and suggestions from all parties to insure that our operations provide for a safe and healthy environment for work.
